We went out in the mini bus.
The sun was shining, the sky was blue and we were all feeling happy.

We drove to Arbroath and parked in the car park. We all walked along the footpath to the harbour. We went past fishing boats and sailing boats.

We stopped by some lobster pots because we had seen something interesting.

What is everyone looking at?

We all looked at this man. He was at work.
What was he doing?

We went in to see. He was cleaning some fish.

They were haddock.

We looked at them hanging up.

He lit a wood fire.

When the fish were clean, he put them on the fire to smoke.

This is Mr Spink the fish man, with Katherine and Nastaran.

We bought some fish from Mr Spink's shop.

We said goodbye to Mr Spink and walked to the beach.

We saw clothes hanging up to dry in the sunshine.

There are rocks and small pools of water on the beach at Arbroath. There isn't much sand and the water is too cold for swimming. We had a lovely time walking in the sun and looking for seaweed and small fish.

Weam picks up some seaweed.

"This is kelp. It's good for your skin!" she said.

We went to a coffee shop.

“I would like some tea please,” says Phoebe.

“I would like a cup of coffee please,” says Katherine.

The coffee shop was nice and the waitress was friendly. She was wearing a pretty apron and cap.

We said goodbye and went in the mini bus back to Mitchell Street.
